Storms Fail to Halt Relentless Hostilities 117 MEN AND OFFICERS REPORTED BY CAPTAIN IN EXCELLENT HEALTH

SMASHING BLOWS ON SHIPPING

Even as Hurricane Slashes Trail of Disaster Through Spain, and Rain and Snow Ravage Breadth of Continent, Daily Report of German High Command Underscores Success at Sea of Both Submarines and Bombing Planes

APPREHENSIVE EYE IS KEPT ON THE FAR EAST

Weather laid a violent hand on Europe over the weekend, but even hurricane-born storm failed to halt the relentless war in the air and on the seas.

Britain—still keeping an apprehensive eye on suspected trouble in the Far East—reported she had sent RAF bombers on a 2,000-mile roundtrip flight to western Poland to drop pamphlets and others, with bombs, to attack the Nazi-held Dutch and Belgian coasts.

Even as a hurricane was slashing a trail of disaster through Spain and storms were ravaging the breadth of the continent, the daily report of the German High Command underscored new smashing blows on Britain's merchant shipping. It said they were contributed both by submarines and bombing planes.

Gales over the Dover Strait enforced a full last night, but Nazi raiders were reported back in the vicinity of several English towns today and air raid alarm sirens sounded in the London area. Yesterday were said to have sunk one 6,000-ton merchantman off Scotland and another vessel west of Ireland and to have damaged a third north of the English port of great Yarmouth. "Packed planes" on an airport were reported destroyed.

One submarine was reported to have sent 11,000 tons of shipping to the bottom and another to have raised its score from 20,000 to 24,000 tons.

Combined Italian-German air raids on Malta, Britain's mid-Mediterranean air and naval station, were reported by the Italian High Command. It said Nazi fighters shot down three British Hurricanes and Fascist bombers bombed the Mikabba airport.

The Fascist communiqué credited German fliers alone with having bombed British air bases and communication lines in north Africa "violently" and Italian fliers alone with low-altitude scatter bomb and machine-gun attacks on defense works, troops and supply columns in Albania. It said Italian planes also bombed the British island of Crete.

Britain's show of uneasiness in the Far East by announcing she was extending the belt of mine-fields guarding the sea approaches to her great naval base at Singapore produced several sequels.

Turkey and Bulgaria Accord Is Setback to British in Balkans

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 17.—(P)—Bulgaria and Turkey have reached a non-aggression accord, reliable informants said today, adding that it meant that Turkey would not fight in event German troops entered Bulgaria. If the reported pact proves to have the effects outlined by the informants, British observers acknowledged it would be a sharp blow to British influence in the Balkans.

Some diplomatic observers thought it might even remove any need for Germany actually to send troops through Bulgaria. They felt that Greece might yield promptly once the pact is formally announced. Mervely the prospect of a German assault, these observers held, would be enough for Greece—this despite the victories she has won against Italy.

The odds would be tremendously against the Greeks if they had to face combined Nazi and Fascist armies. It was reported that the agreement followed upon several weeks of negotiations and was, in part, a restatement of the former treaty of friendship between Turkey and Bulgaria. It is expected to involve withdrawal of Turkish and Bulgarian troops from both sides of their frontier.

AID BILL DEBATED IN SENATE

Senator Barkley, Democratic Leader, Opens Discussions on Administration's Lend-Lease Measure With Assertion That If Hitler Wins United States Will Face "Not Only Hostile Germany, But Hostile World"

CHAIRMAN GEORGE IS UNABLE TO TAKE PART

Washington, Feb. 17.—(P)—Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, opened debate on the administration's aid-to-Britain bill today with an assertion that if Germany wins the present war the United States will face "not only a hostile Germany, but a hostile world."

Speaking before well-filled senate galleries, Barkley explained provisions of the far-reaching legislation, which would permit the president to lend, lease or transfer American-made military equipment to warring "democracies."

Barkley substituted for Chairman George (D-Ga.), of the foreign relations committee as the first administration speaker after a throat ailment prevented George from delivering the first argument in support of the measure.

Barkley quoted statements by Adolf Hitler and his lieutenants, and said that they demonstrated that "one of the motives for this war is the economic domination of the world."

As the debate shifted to the Senate from the House, Stephen Early, White House press secretary, told reporters that a group of ranking government officials would meet today to make advance arrangements for administration of the lend-lease bill if and when it passes. Early termed this "taking time by the forelock."

Those scheduled to confer included the secretaries of war, treasury, navy and agriculture and the budget director, Harry L. Hopkins, former secretary of commerce, who just returned from England, also was invited to sit in.

Despite the momentous character of the legislation, there was a touch of the anti-climactic about the occasion. Unlike the Supreme Court reorganization battle, the wordy war over the League of Nations, and other memorable Senate debates in the past, the start of argument found Capitol Hill in (Turn to Page Nine)

BROWDER LOSES HIS APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

Washington, Feb. 17.—(P)—The Supreme Court upheld today the conviction of Earl Browder, 1940 presidential nominee of the Communist party, on a charge of willfully using a passport obtained by false statements.

Justice Reed delivered the decision. No dissent was announced. Justice Murphy, former attorney general, did not participate. Browder was convicted by a jury in the southern New York Federal District Court. He was sentenced to four years' imprisonment and fined $2,000. The verdict was upheld by the Federal Circuit Court at New York.

BADLY IN NEED OF AID

Washington, Feb. 17.—(P)—The four weeks which Harry L. Hopkins spent in embattled England, talking to her leaders and President Roosevelt first-hand information on the status of Britain's struggle with Germany.

Carrying a black brief case, bulging with data, Hopkins got back to the White House last night, not many hours after he stepped ashore in New York from a transatlantic plane. He saw Mr. Roosevelt almost at once, and the belief was that his trip would be the subject of a number of further conferences.

Hopkins, sent abroad by the President in the extraordinary capacity of personal representative, was guarded about the purpose of his trip and none too specific about his findings.

He did, however, have these things to say when he stepped ashore from the Clipper plane yesterday:

"I don't think Hitler can lick these (English) people. They're as tough as a crowd as there is. With our help, they'll win."

"This will not be a stalemate war. My opinions are based on observations I made during four weeks in England and Scotland. I saw their military and naval strength. I watched their preparation for the air raids from the hotel and homes I visited. They're tough, these English."

"We won't have to give them soldiers—what they need is material."

NOTED CLOTHIER IS HEART VICTIM

Cleveland, Feb. 17.—(P)—Nathan G. Richman, 72, chairman of Richman Brothers Co., men's clothing manufacturer which operates 60 retail stores in eastern United States, died today after a heart attack.

One of the first to introduce profit-sharing in the clothing industry, the Richman Company's employee-employer relations have been studied widely. The company has had more than 60 years' operation free of labor trouble.

Richman entered the clothing business at 16 under his father, Henry Richman, who established the company in Portsmouth, O., in 1856 and moved its headquarters to Cleveland in 1879.

The Richman Company was an originator of the factory-to-consumer method of selling clothes. (Turn to Page Six)

Second Time Within a Quarter of a Century Has Become Part of the Army's Standing Combat Force

By RICE YARNER
Associated Press Correspondent
Indiantown Gap, Feb. 17.—(P)—Pennsylvania's historic "Iron Division" of the American Expeditionary Force was inducted into federal service today for at least a year, 12,000 men dropping the tools of civilian life to stand in the nation's armed forces for any duty.

It was the second time within a quarter of a century that the state's National Guard division—a red keystone is its insignia—became a part of the army's standing combat force. In the World War, its record was renowned.

Major General Edward Martin, commander of the Pennsylvania National Guardsmen, today became commander of this 14,000-acre post where they will train. He pointed to the division's tradition in a message read to all units as they assembled at home stations at 8 a. m. today.

Leon Henderson, head of the price stabilization division of the defense commission, announced the "ceiling" on resale charges on machine tools. He said in a statement that the program will be extended where necessary "to assist the full force of the federal government in procuring and equipping, to protect the public interest against those seeking to profit exorbitantly on defense requirements."

The commission also directed second-hand dealers in the tools to make weekly reports to the government on their stocks on hand and to submit monthly reports on all sales and the prices obtained.

The commission said that some machine tools have been priced at more than twice the amount they cost when purchased 30 or more years ago and that cases had been reported of second-hand tools being quoted at higher prices than new ones.

Intensive Program Mapped Out for Members of Company I During Their Stay at Local Armory, Including Study of Military Principles as Well as Regular Drills; With Every Hour of the Day Being Occupied Through Activity of Some Nature; Physical Training to Be Emphasized

LAST RECRUIT IS RECEIVED SUNDAY EVENING JUST PRIOR TO DEADLINE FOR APPLICATIONS

Officially mustered into federal service for a year's duration, members of Company I, 112th Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard, today began a ten-day training period at the local armory before leaving for Indiantown Gap, where they will join other units of the 28th Division.

There are 117 officers and men in the company, the last one having been enlisted last evening, just prior to the deadline for receiving additional men. No enlistments in the company are permitted after the company's induction into the U. S. Army.

Upon the officers of the local unit falls the task of carrying out a busy schedule set up for the company during the ten-day period. An intensive program has been mapped out for the men during that time and every hour of the day will be occupied with activity of some kind.

All of the men reported this morning in fine condition, very few colds being evident and no other illness reported. According to Capt. Roy P. Miskimon, commanding officer of Company I, every precaution will be taken to protect the health of the men.

The captain this morning emphasized the fact that the men are warmly clothed and well fed, not only for their stay in Warren, but after they arrive at Indiantown Gap.

From now until they leave for the Gap, the local company will eat at Oscar's Restaurant. Mess will be at 6 a. m., 12 noon and 5:30 p. m. Capt. Miskimon said this morning that the cost of feeding the company is $132.20 per day.

Most of the men in Company I will sleep at their homes for the next ten days but will report for duty early each morning. Various types of training are scheduled, including study of military principles as well as regular drills. Physical training is included to help harden the men for the year's activity that is ahead.

First Lieut. Austin L. Swanson, who has spent the past three weeks at a special school at Valley Forge Military Academy, Wayne, Pa., arrived home last night and was on hand this morning to help train the company.

Several of the men who enlisted in the company recently have not yet received their uniforms and equipment. However, requests for the equipment have been sent to the quartermaster's department and by the end of the week, all members of the company are expected to be fully equipped.

First call for the men each day, except Sunday, is at 5:15 a. m., with reveille at 5:55 and assembly at 6:00. Mess is at 6:30 and sick call at 7:00. On Sundays these calls are one hour later.

Other calls during the day are as follows: Drill—first call, 7:25 a. m.; assembly, 7:30, recall, 11:30; mess, 12 noon. Drill—first call, 12:35 p. m.; assembly, 1:00; recall, 5:00. Retreat—first call 5:10; retreat, 5:15. Mess, 5:30. School, 7:00-8:00. Tattoo, 9:30. Call to quarters, 9:45. Taps, 10:00.

Following is the complete training schedule for the ten-day period, announced today by Capt. Miskimon:

Monday, Feb. 17, 8:00 a. m., induction into service; 9:30-10:30, close order; 10:30-11:00, military courtesy; 11:00-11:30, care of clothing; 1:00-2:00 p. m., physical training; 2:30-2:50, scouting and

Red Cross Headquarters Is Scene Of Much Activity as Workers Knit And Sew Garments for War Relief

The basement of the Metzger-Wright store, headquarters for Red Cross sewing and knitting, has been the scene of a great amount of activity during the past three months and scores of garments have been provided by the volunteers in Warren and vicinity. It was reported today by Mrs. R. W. Steber, chairman of the production for war relief committee of the Warren County Chapter, American Red Cross.

"Probably few people in Warren, aside from those directly connected with it, have any idea of the amount of Red Cross work going through the headquarters," Mrs. Steber said.

She pointed out that at the headquarters, the cloth for garments is received, cut to pattern and then distributed for sewing to the various units and to individuals. Sewing is also done at headquarters.

There, too, the yarn for sweaters and other knitted garments is received, checked in and then distributed to individuals. When the garments are completed, they are returned to the headquarters, checked, counted, packed and sent on to New York for shipment abroad.

The first quota of work has now been almost entirely completed and shipped, Mrs. Steber said. This quota included the following items: 65 convalescent robes, 60 hospital pajamas, 35 women's dresses, 75 women's skirts, 175 girls' dresses, 125 girls' skirts, 35 boys' overalls, 60 boys' shirts, 50 women's sweaters, 30 men's sweaters, 300 children's sweaters.

In addition, there were sent quantities of scarfs, socks, handkerchiefs and quilts made from the scraps of materials not utilized in the garments. Also 125 babyettes will be shipped this week, each consisting of two outing flannel dresses, two flannel gowns, two knitted shirts, two pairs stockings, two flannel bands, two pairs booties, one dozen diapers, two flannel blankets, cap, kimono, wash cloth and a dozen safety pins.

Dresses, gowns, caps, kimono, blankets, booties and diapers have all been made by the workers. The other garments have been purchased by the local committee through funds donated by friends for this cause.

This work has been the result of those who have worked at the headquarters, the fourteen Red Cross units established throughout the county, the church units in

Warren, the Girl Scouts and various women's organizations. "Too high praise cannot be given to those women who have sacrificed themselves by giving their time and energy to the making of these articles so desperately needed by the war sufferers abroad," Mrs. Steber said. "When the call has come, the women of Warren county have never been slow to meet it."

Material for the second quota has arrived at headquarters. It is the hope of the women now engaged in the Red Cross work that more will help and carry on in even greater measure the work which has been so splendidly begun, Mrs. Steber said.

"FLIGHT COMMAND" AT THE LIBRARY THEATRE TODAY AND TUESDAY

Thrills in the air and tense drama on earth mingle in "Flight Command," exciting drama of naval aviation with Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey and Walter Pidgeon today and Tuesday at the Library Theatre.

It is the romance of a Pensacola air cadet who goes through a baptism of fire with a crack naval squadron at North Island. Amid the thrills runs a story of friendships, a misunderstanding that threatens his career, and the intense loyalty of a group of daredevil flyers who laugh in the face of peril.

Taylor as Alan Drake, the cadet, is forceful and compelling as an actor, and Walter Pidgeon handles the role of the squadron commander skilfully, while Ruth Hussey, as his wife, plumbs emotional depths. Frank Borzage gave the poignant emotional moments and the skilful direction that marked his "Mortal Storm."

Principals include Paul Kelly, Shepperd Strudwick, Nat Pendleton, Red Skelton, Dick Purcell and others. Hal Rosson provided interesting photography.

Rubber—None vul.
South West North East
2 N.T. Pass Pass Pass
Opening—9. 15

This is the last of a series of 12 articles on the new bidding rules in the 1941 Culbertson System.

BY WM. E. MCKENNEY
America's Card Authority

In the 1941 Culbertson System, the requirements for opening two no trump bids are very slightly reduced, such a bid now being recommended with as few as five honor tricks, provided all four suits are very strongly stopped.

On hands of 4-3-3-3 or 4-4-3-2 distribution, a player is supposed to bid two no trump in preference to an opening two-bid in a suit, even though he is strong enough for a two-bid. In today's hand, South has the technical requirements for an opening two-spade bid in the Culbertson System, but is supposed to bid two no trump instead, as practically all expert players would.

The requirements for raises have been slightly increased. Previously a two no trump bid would be raised with one-half honor trick. Now more than one-half honor trick is required, and North, even with a king, was correct under the 1941 Culbertson rules in passing.

Although both spades and clubs broke badly for him, South managed to make his contract by accurate counting. He won the opening lead with the diamond ace, and led a low club. West took this with the nine and led another diamond, which South won in his own hand. Another small club led by South was taken by East's queen, and the jack of hearts was led, covered by South's queen, and won by West's ace. West now led the club king.

South took the club ace, cashed three spades, then took his high heart and threw East in with the eight of spades. East had to lead a diamond, giving dummy the diamond king, and South his eighth trick for his contract.

METHODIST MEN ENJOY LINCOLN BIRTHDAY TALK

Youngsville, Feb. 15.—Lincoln's birthday was fittingly observed at the meeting of the Methodist Brotherhood held Thursday evening in the church. The address of the evening was given by Quinton Wolf, teacher of history in the Youngsville High School. Mr. Wolfe, after paying tribute to Abraham Lincoln, talked about conditions in Warren county in the days of Lincoln, speaking particularly of the sacrifices made by the people of the county in the Civil War.

At that time the population of the county was only about 19,000 and 1,200 were sent from the county as Union soldiers. Most of the towns organized their men into companies. Warren, Youngsville, and Fidelity organized one or more companies each. Some of the soldiers made the first part of their trip to join the greater army on rafts. Mr. Wolfe's careful search of this subject brought many unusual facts to light.

A luncheon was served following the meeting. At the business session the group planned to participate in the Laymen Day program on Sunday, February 23rd. It was also decided to meet for the

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—George Wojcinski is a Pole. He came out of the traffic of West Street, kicking slush from his feet and stamping his feet just a little on the pavement in front of the freight office of the 42nd Street station.

He hadn't been there a minute before hundreds of gray, softly-talking pigeons began dropping out of the sky, crowding him on the sidewalk, pecking at his feet, trying to light on his shoulder.

George Wojcinski gave a deep laugh and began tossing corn about on the sidewalk and into the street. His pockets were bulging with grain. He fills them every day and comes looking for the pigeons, and they wait for him. When you feed a thing every day, it gets to know you pretty well.

"You do this every day?" I asked. "Sure. I eat every day, don't I?"

"These are my babies," he said. "Been doing this for years—maybe ten years. I got lots of corn. This isn't the only place. I got five feeding stations."

AS HE talked he continued to sprinkle the yellow grain, but you couldn't see it on the ground. Pigeons eat fast. At least New York's waterfront pigeons do. One moment it is there and the next it has vanished down a hundred gullets.

"I go over to 11th Avenue from here," volunteered George Wojcinski. "I cross the street here and go on over to 11th Avenue."

I asked him if he didn't get the same crowd, whether or not these same birds wouldn't follow him and sup from the second table. "Oh, no," he replied earnestly. "I can recognize them. I wouldn't stand for it."

If he was trying to pull my leg he made a good job of it. He seemed perfectly sincere. To him these feathered, fat fellows were personalities. He could pick an old friend out of the flock at a glance. "That's old Buff," he called. He pointed to a mouse-colored bird that waddled out from under a big freight truck. "Me and old Buff's been friends for years. He went away last month and I thought something had him. He was gone five days."

GEORGE WOJCINSKI, who is 51 and who came out of the ancient winding streets of Krakow 26 years ago, says his hobby costs him about twenty-five cents a day. "You go to movies I bet," said George. "I don't. I feed pigeons."

He threw old Buff a glance and moved on down the street. He didn't say anything more. His pockets still bulged with the yellow manna. Old Buff stared back at George, and the look he got in return was the equivalent of "Nix, pal. . . . You're had yours. Don't let me catch you horning in on the little party I'm about to throw your friends in 11th Avenue."

Then he struck out across West Street, and old Buff and I just stood there and watched him go.

WARREN COUNTY DIRECT RELIEF ROLLS ARE CUT

Warren county direct relief rolls showed a decrease of two cases during the week ending February 8, bringing the total number of cases down to 220, representing 681 persons, according to information from the office of Howard L. Russell, state secretary of public assistance.

The decrease was the result of opening 14 cases and closing 16, the report shows. Of the cases opened, six lost private employment, two lost WPA employment, two had unemployment compensation payments stopped, two were transferred from Old Age Assistance or Aid to Dependent Children and two were opened for other reasons. Of the cases closed, seven received WPA jobs, two were transferred to Old Age Assistance or Aid to Dependent Children and five were closed for other reasons.

Cost of direct assistance in the county during the week was $1,132.25.

In the state, general assistance rolls turned downward during the week as state financed relief load registered a net decrease of 1,926 cases. At the end of the week the total was 140,322 cases, representing 351,859 persons. Cost of relief for the week was $854,635.23.

Following are the figures for some nearby counties: Clarion—Cases, 292; no change; cost, $1,566.35. Crawford—Cases, 510; increase, 8; cost, $2,365.15. Elk—Cases, 220; decrease, 14; cost, $1,198.67. Erie—Cases, 1,396; decrease, 61; cost, $7,511.41. Forest—Cases, 75; increase, 1; cost, $332.49. McKean—Cases, 396; decrease, 26; cost, $1,584.36. ## YOUR INCOME TAX

FORMS FOR MAKING RETURNS

Forms for filing returns of income for 1940 have been sent to persons who filed returns last year. Failure to receive a form, however, does not relieve a taxpayer of his obligation to file his return or pay the tax on time.

Forms may be obtained upon request, written or personal, from the offices of collectors and from deputy collectors of internal revenue in the larger cities and towns.

A person whose gross income for 1940 was derived from salary, wages, dividends, interest, and annuities, and was not in excess of $5,000 should make his return on Form 1040-A. A person whose gross income was in excess of $5,000, or, regardless of amount, was derived from a business, profession, rents, or sale of property is required to use Form 1040. Failure to use the proper form presents difficulties to both the taxpayer and the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Therefore, it is emphasized that a taxpayer who is liable for a return and is engaged in a

What the students from South America said to the students of North Carolina may not have amounted to very much so far because of language difficulties, but all together they're learning a lot, having fun and furthering Pan-American relations. Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Uruguay have sent 109 youths to the University of North Carolina to study the English language and U. S. way of life. Trip was arranged by Institute of International Education, aided by U. S. State Department and governments of South American countries, which paid expenses of some students. A STATEMENT OF AMERICANISM

In these days of peril our lives are more and more affected, our freedom restricted, our home circles altered, in the necessities of Democracy's preservation. As our sacrifices become more severe we each of us need a clearer understanding of what Democracy means, what in essence it is. We sense something worth sacrifice in our right to speak out loud in criticism of anyone from a Borough councilman to the President of the United States, but what it is calls for incisive and noble statement.

James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, who left New York Saturday on the first leg of a journey to England, as head of a special new mission charged with expediting directly to Washington "recent scientific information of importance to national defense," in his annual report to the university, makes searching analysis of this essence of Democracy, and his words state that something which is worth fighting for. He speaks, with slight paraphrase, as follows:

The true spirit of liberty is founded on the golden mean between destructive criticism on the one hand and complacent acceptance of dogma on the other. For a free nation must hold a middle course and not be swayed by the disgruntled who would be revolutionists nor by the privileged who would be Bourbons. This golden mean is in a sense illogical. It is hard of realization because it represents a way of life. It rests on a choice of certain values, yet implies a choice of other values which may still be made. It implies wide divergence in many loyalties, yet one all-embracing loyalty. A smug acceptance of standards handed down from Olympus and a contempt for all criteria of values are equally disastrous to the flowering of the spirit of which I speak. No nation was ever united by blasphemy or by sneers.

"I believe in the dignity of the individual, in government by law, in respect for the truth and in a good God. These beliefs are worth my life and more; they are not shared by Adolf Hitler, and he will not permit them to me unless he has to."

I admire the boldness of the author of that statement in grasping what to some may seem a time-worn phrase—the dignity of the individual—and raising it once again on high. There has been too much degradation of our symbols of a free faith, too much debasement of our national courage. To reassert a fundamental thesis in simple terms requires courage. Yet I take it we all agree that the common denominator of such ideas as liberty, freedom, free institutions, justice, the search for truth is the concept of individual integrity. A belief in the importance of this ideal is the cardinal doctrine of the free institutions of the world. As we look back through history long since dead as we read of new heresies warring with heresies grown old we are made men of new heresies warring with heresies grown old in our ancestry—the sturdy recognition of the infinite human capacities and dignity of the individual man.

Whether we speak in honor of freedom, of advancing human knowledge, or of the quest for truth we base our case fundamentally on a single premise—the premise of Catholic and Protestant alike—the significance of the individual. This, to my mind is the doctrine now challenged by the destructive forces loose upon the world. This is the doctrine, I take it, we are preparing to defend.

With such a concept of Americanism, we as Americans can and must be emboldened to make any sacrifice in preservation of the Democratic, Christian, American way of life.

Company I was inducted into Federal service this morning for at least a year's training. Regardless of the type of duties the boys may be called on to perform in the next twelve months we are certain that they will respond with credit to their Regiment and the community they represent. And when it is all over here's wishing them a safe return!

The management of the West Ridge Transportation Company is making a commendable contribution toward the success of the forthcoming Dollar Days Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, in agreeing to carry shoppers free on all inbound trips within the borough limits between nine and eleven a. m. and one and three p. m. on each of the three days.

As a result of action taken by the Warren County Ministerial Association, Earl Selective Service Trainee and National Guardsman called into the service from this community will receive a new testament. This is a move that will not only be much appreciated by the boys themselves but by their relatives and friends.

A cordial welcome to Miss Edith Atkins, who has arrived from Amsterdam, N. Y., to take over her new duties as superintendent of the Warren General Hospital.

The importance of checking one's hazards in the home has been for by demonstrated in the county during the past week.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER
NEW YORK—This morning I lay in bed until noon and then went into the city and to lunch with Charles Gorman, of the publishing firm of Doubleday. Gorman and I had a table overlooking Nelson Rockefeller's skating rink in Rockefeller Center, and found the skating so eye-filling we neglected our eggs benedict until they were quite cold. And it seems to me that I have seen one of the finest free shows in New York, for it goes on all morning and all afternoon and in the evenings as well, and on the ice are beautifully trained skaters who swoop like birds, and it costs nothing to see.

Later to the office and to my desk, which still shows the effects of a long absence, and then to the office of George Sutton who remembered my illness with numerous cheery notes, and we talked of his prize ducks in Connecticut, and of Lani McIntyre, whose Hawaiians have followed Ray Kinney into the Lexington hotel's Hawaiian Room, and who once told me he would rather live in Tahiti than anywhere on earth.

And in Howard Swiggett's fine biography of Morgan, "The Rebel Raider," I did come upon a most fascinating piece of information—namely this: Morgan's bride had Bids for the construction of 12,000 feet of road through Tidoute borough will be opened tomorrow and if they are acceptable to all parties concerned, it is probable that construction work will commence not later than April 1st. There are probably at least 1,000 idle men in Warren and there will probably be at least half that many on April 1st.

The local order of Owls, No. 1198 today purchased the property of the late George Ball on Hickory street from the Warren Savings Bank and Trust Company and will take possession May 1st. The consideration was $8,500. The new home of the order will be remodelled throughout the interior.

After several months delay, work has at last been commenced on the forming of a post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and there are already 27 men who have signed the application for charter. Robert McConnell has been sworn in as an organizer for this district.

The rains of last evening put the finishing touches on what were already the best roads the county has ever seen at this time of the year.

Ecuador Stamp Honors California Missions

THE Missions of California, representing one of the greatest missionary achievements in America, are remembered in Ecuador's stamp issue, issued in honor of the 1899 Golden Gate International Exposition. The Mission Dolores, also known as the Mission San Francisco de Asis, is pictured.

The first of the 21 missions was established by Fra Junipero Serra at San Diego in 1769. Fra Serra also founded nine others of the chain which extended at intervals of 30 miles along El Camino Real—"The King's Highway"—from San Diego to San Francisco.

The Missions strengthened Spain's claim upon Upper California, and at their peak sheltered, clothed, civilized some 30,000 Indians. When Mexico threw off allegiance to Spain, the Missions were secularized, property confiscated in 1823. The Indians returned to barbarism.

Today, the Missions are one of California's greatest tourist attractions. Several are well-preserved. Mission style architecture and furniture also are reminders of Fra Serra's work.

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON—Within a few days now, what is—to me at least—one of the strangest phases of national defense will open its doors. It is privately financed and only partially government supervised, but it is provided for by law and recognized by the military as an integral part of the defense set-up. It is the first camp for conscientious objectors.

With 125 to 150 boys, whose religious or conscientious scruples prevent their taking part in any militaristic activities, Patapoco State Park camp, near Baltimore, Md., will be the first of a nationwide network of camps where lads who will not spill blood will do their civilian bit by giving a year of labor to work that is useful to the nation and a contribution to the national welfare.

Patapoco is an abandoned Civilian Conservation Corps camp and what these boys will do there is not a great deal different from the non-militaristic activities of the CCC. They'll contribute to reforestation, soil conservation, road construction, and the hundred or so other things which are considered vital to national welfare, but which have nothing to do directly with the defense program.

The C.O.'s who will go into these civilian camps should not be confused with those who will be inducted into the army for non-combatant training, such as that in the medical corps. The latter's scruples forbid only participation in actual combat.

6,700 Already Listed
PLANS for the civilian training camps, of which Patapoco is the first, were prepared by several government agencies, and the National Service Board of Religious Objectors. This latter is a coordinating board which represents all the religious groups whose beliefs forbid participation in wars or war activities.

The plan was given the official stamp recently when President Roosevelt issued an executive order setting the machinery in motion.

One Objector
AT least one amusing story has come out of the preliminary plans for the C.O. camps. Officials tell of one patriotic Monmouth farmer who inquired what his pacifist sons would have to do in the camp. He was informed that they would have to work eight hours a day. The old farmer exploded like a volcano.

"Eight hours," he shouted. "No son of mine is going to a place like that. Fourteen hours is a good day's work. These camps will only send my sons home lazy."

ALONG CAME CINDERELLA

By VIVIEN GREY

YESTERDAY: Roger Cosgrave and Emily Perry are to be married in a month. Perhaps "here" is the word, however, because quite by accident Roger has met Lovely Daye, beautiful girl of the tenements, and since then Emily's cool poise has not seemed the same to Roger. Now Mari, who is giving a party for him and for Emily, has mentioned Lovely with Emily in the neighborhood, and Roger is in doubt whether Emily understood.

Chapter Ten The Comb

ROGER turned to Emily then. He searched her face. She was smiling faintly. Was she pale?

But Emily never had much color. She was definitely pale. It was probably only the contrast between Lovely's vividness and Emily's pastel tones which made him imagine for an instant she was more pale than usual. She was smiling. Everything must be all right. Girls didn't smile when their love affairs were upset.

But for all that Roger knew a raw sense of amputation. It was as if sudden certain knowledge had been given him that something had passed quite beyond his hands. It confused him.

A waiter passed with cocktails. He was saying something to Roger.

"I thought you might be here, sir. Your lady friend dropped this the other day, sir."

Roger stared at the man stupidly. He was about to say: "You must be mistaken."

Then he looked at the thing the man had thrust into his hand. A cheap comb. Obviously not the kind Emily would have if she used such ornaments. It was Lovely's. The man must have served at their table at Fumble Inn that morning. Why hadn't he noticed and avoided the fellow?

Yet how could he have? He wouldn't have known him. He had the feeling employing the man had been one of Mari's diabolical tricks. Yet it couldn't have been. She couldn't possibly have known one of those little combs had slipped out of Lovely's hair.

Emily was smiling at him still, that queer set smile.

"A comb," she said. "The sort girls do up their curls with."

"Yes, silly things! How he ever happened to hand it to me!" Roger looked at it again and then with a sudden gesture hurled it out into the darkness.

The party was moving in little eddies about them. Picking them up in the web of its gaiety and carrying them along.

Ursula—Sully to her intimates—Blair arrived; swept in, on a cloud of expensive scent, the pale cheeks of her unusually long skirt trailing the polished floor.

"Sully's gone grand on us!" someone greeted her, which was the signal for Sully to kick up her heels with the flippancy which only Sully had.

Emily laughed. Roger swung her into the mad dance that whirled about them. Her laughter brought back his poise. The evening moved on in the usual lively pattern of such evenings.

Once when Roger was seeking Emily after dancing with Sully, Emily's cousin stopped him.

They were standing back of the big wing chair in the apparently deserted library.

Misunderstanding

"Hi, Roger!" John Carr was to be one of his ushers at his and Emily's wedding. "Hear you've picked a peach for the wedding old last fling?"

"What do you mean, John?" Roger's voice was a trace sharp.

"Mean?" John had been accepting more of Mari's cocktails than he needed for proper party gaiety. "Why the beauty you've got up there at Granny Hale's of course. The swell set of ankles you've picked yourself. Come on! You're not kidding anyone."

"I'm not trying to, John," Roger's voice was stern.

"You might have had better taste anyhow than to bring her right here under Emily's nose!" The liquor in John was getting natty.

"You're in no condition to talk, John. Forget it."

"No condition to talk! Well, I'm talking anyhow. There are things I want to say to you. After all, Emily's my cousin and I want to see her treated right. If you want to have a last fling why don't you keep your girl down in Hell's Kitchen where she belongs?"

A man ought to have some respect for the girl he's going to marry."

"But up, John! You're talking about something you don't know anything about." Roger's voice was sharp and was accompanied by the sound of a smart slap. Involuntarily he'd swung at John, connecting with his face.

John leaned heavily against the woodwork of the door, holding his face.

"Wait till I see you tomorrow!" thickly. But Roger was moving on.

It was a few seconds before Emily caught up with him.

"Roger! Roger, where are you going? A muted breathlessness was in her voice.

"I was looking for you." He stopped abruptly and turned to her. "Where had she been? She had come from the direction in which he had had that unpleasant encounter with John Carr. That backed wing chair he's been standing behind! She couldn't have been sitting there. He chilled.

"Where were you?" he asked sharply.

"Back there!" And then before he could say anything more: "Roger, let's go home. If we slip away no one'll miss us even if the party is for us."

Roger looked at her intently. "Tired?" he asked.

"I—I must be." In a voice that wasn't quite steady. "Please, let's go!"

In the car Emily's hand touched his on the wheel. Her voice was strangely smothered as she said: "Roger, let's talk. There's something—well, I didn't ask you where you'd been last night because I was afraid to. I saw that lipstick on your collar but I blinded myself to what it meant. I thought you'd come back to me and that was all that mattered. But you hadn't come back. And now I've got to ask you. I heard you and John. I couldn't help it. You and John. I was confessing a fault and Roger felt a wave of suddenly overwhelming sympathy and tenderness for her. "I was sitting in that chair," she continued, "that wing chair, waiting for you, hoping you'd find me."

He couldn't reply immediately. "Roger, you've got to tell me," still in that uneasy, stifled voice. "I've got to know. Where were you last night? Where did you come from when you found me there on the piazza?"

Roger stared into the night. He had never been called on to do anything harder or more distasteful. Anything more cruel.

"From Granny Hale's cottage, Emily."

"And today? That was where you went today? Why were you late for Mari's party?"

"Yes! Yes, Emily. I might as well be honest with you."

"Who is she, Roger? Who is she?"

"Her name is Lovely Daye." Roger began slowly as if talking to himself, repeating something by rote. "That's all I know. There's no use trying to tell you anything more about her because I don't know, except," and he hesitated, looking darkly into the shadows, wondering whether or not to go on and say the rest. "Except that she's fire in my veins. A fever in me. I'm sorry, but it's something I can't help."

"It's one of the girls from that picnic, isn't it?" she persisted. "I knew something then. Roger, I could feel it somehow. Like a shadow coming before the thing really happened."

"Yes," quietly.

"Roger, you're not in love with her!" Alarm running like a wild thing in the words.

"I don't know. I don't know what to call it. It's, it's own voice none too steady, something I can't throw off. I've tried to, Emily, but I can't." Piercely.

"Perhaps I should be ashamed but I'm not."

Lovely's Visitors

EMILY made no answer. She sat with her face in her hands and Roger had a vague notion she was crying quietly. Her shoulders seemed to shake. He knew he should put his arm around her. He wanted to but he couldn't. He waited silently. Finally Emily looked up.

"She can't have you, Roger." She spoke quietly and calmly. "She can't. I won't let you go. You're engaged to me. We're going to be married three weeks from today—just as it's planned."

And Roger knew a vague sense of satisfaction. Of peace. As if at last the thing was settled for him, without his having to settle it and he was glad.

"You can take me home now," she said quietly.

"He kissed her mechanically as he left her."

"Good night, Roger," she said in the soft frightened voice of a child.

"Good night." He patted her shoulder as if he would have reassured her.

At the gate of the Perry place Roger suppressed an impulse to turn up the hill toward Granny Hale's house. Emily might have decided what she would do but she had done nothing to cool the fire that burned in his blood. It had not erased the imprint of Lovely Daye from his heart.

Lovely was as real and desirable to him as the first time he'd held her in his arms. He went into the house and up to his room with the feeling that he should go up to see her.

Next morning he knew he should have.

It was barely eight when he heard a squeal to a stop under his window. He looked out. John Carr was standing beside the machine oddly battered and disheveled.

Roger went down to him.

"How'd the other fellow come out?" he asked good-naturedly. John had been drinking the night before and Roger never held anything done under the influence of liquor against his friends.

"Been up to see your girl," John informed him dizzily. "Wow what a wild cat! You pick 'em rough!"

Roger went suddenly white. His hands were clenching against his will. He was trying desperately to keep calm.

"Are you telling me you were at Granny Hale's cottage?" he asked in an ominous tone.

"That's the place, boy. I thought I'd like to see what your friend was like. That girl certainly pulls a lot of tricks she never learned in finishing school. Hugh's still in there."

YESTERDAY: Emily Perry at last has been told by her fiancé, Roger Cosgrave, that there is another girl. Her name is Lovely Daye, and her social status is far below the Cosgrave-Perry level. Yet Roger cannot marry two girls, and he does not see how it can be Emily. Now he has driven furiously to the cottage where Lovely is staying because two of his friends may, he thinks, be annoying her.

Chapter 11 Worse Tangle

ROGER felt himself suddenly going mad. Hugh Chase, another of his ushers, still up there with Lovely. He said nothing more to John. He rushed to the garage and jumped into his car. Blue Blaze, the Kerry that had been at his heels was in beside him, his nose up to the wind as the car raced madly up steep Mount Airy Road.

It wasn't until after he had started that Roger was vaguely aware of his mother's voice calling him as he rushed to the garage.

At Granny Hale's cottage he found Lovely sitting on the steps, facing the river, Hugh beside her. Hugh's smile was not a particularly nice thing to look at as Roger joined them. It was seclusive, unpleasant.

"Well, beautiful lady, this looks like my exit," he said to Lovely, rising and contriving somehow to be leeringly possessive and offensive.

"Roger!" Undisguised gladness in her voice. "But why must you go just because Roger's here? Let's have a breakfast party!"

"No, I'll be on my way."

Blaze had crowded in close to Lovely. With her hand on the dog's handsome head she watched Hugh go. Roger studied her face with jealous worry that he dared not voice until she turned to him.

"Nerts!" she said carelessly. "They rolled in here at four this morning, one of them cockeyed as a gabbon. I'd nearly brained him before they made me understand they were friends of yours."

Roger asked, still too shaken to trust his voice much.

Lovely caught something in the tone. She looked at him oddly. "They are friends of yours, aren't they?"

"Yes, I suppose you'd call them that. But don't feel you have to be nice to anyone, Lovely, just because they say they're friends of mine."

"Oh, that's all right! They're nice kids. I like them."

There was a little silence. Roger dared not trust himself to speak. Too many emotions were rioting in his head.

"Was the party nice? Fun?" Lovely asked at length. He caught a wistful note in her voice.

"They told you it was a party?"

"Yes," slowly, "and Emily."

After a space no reply for that. Roger laid his blue-gray head on his knee and looked up with soft, sympathetic eyes. The silence was growing taut when Lovely said:

"Roger, what's she like? Is she pretty? Tell me about her?"

"Pretty?" His mind had been dwelling on the time John and Hugh had been there with Lovely. Just what had transpired? Lovely was so beautiful. He knew suddenly he was insanely jealous of any man who had time alone with her.

"Yes," Lovely was insistent. "I suppose she's beautiful. Rich girls always are."

"She's not beautiful as you are, Lovely," he said honestly. "She's pretty. Sweet."

"You don't want to talk about her, do you?" Lovely asked. "Is it because it's me? Because I'm asking you, and you don't want to talk to me about her?" Her voice was wistful.

Roger smiled. He threw off the spell that had held him.

"No, sweet, it isn't that. It's because I want so desperately to do the decent thing by both of you and I'm beginning to see that I can't."

"I know," very quietly from Lovely. "I've been thinking of that all night." She hesitated as if the words were almost too difficult to push over some barrier of emotion within her. "Roger, I'm the one who doesn't belong in the picture. I know that. I could see it when those boys came in here. You're different. I don't belong."

She paused a moment.

"Renunciation"

"ROGER, I'll do anything you say. I'll go back if you want. I've been happy here. It's so sweet and different and all. And I've wanted this sort of thing terribly. I mean, oh, dresses and rings and But I want you to be happy too. That's a new want." She was trying to laugh a little and it seemed to Roger as he listened that she was laughing very like tears. She was very young and childish then.

He caught her hand and brushed it with his lips.

"Lovely!" Emotion muted.

"So," she was going on in that not quite steady voice. "I want things to be as you want them, for your good. If you know what I mean." She tried to make the last very bright and gay.

"I think I do, Lovely," he said. "And now let's have that breakfast!"

POWERFUL

The average lightning flash has about 500 times as much horsepower as all of America's automobiles put together, according to estimates.

A survey shows that most prose writers reach their creative peaks between 40 and 44, showing a rapid decline before 50.

The title of rabbi is accorded Jewish scholars of eminence as well as those in the ministry.

He watched her move gracefully about the preparation of food. He saw her bend a can she had just opened until the opening was tight shut. He thought he knew why she did it but he asked:

"Why, Gorgeous?" picking up the can with its closed edges.

Lovely laughed.

"Gert taught me that," she said. "One day in the city we saw a cat that had been food hunting in a garbage can get its head stuck in a salmon tin. If you close the tins after opening them you know that isn't happening."

"Good girl," Roger said, his arm around her. No wonder he loved her.

It was around noon when the honking of a car outside disturbed them. They turned to the window. The car was a roadster of expensive make and was driven by a girl who sat looking straight ahead as if not wishing to see the house.

"It's Emily," Roger said. Lovely's gaze became more interested.

"She's pretty," she admitted. "Something must have happened in her voice. 'I'll go out and see.' It must be something pretty important, Roger knew, to have brought Emily up here."

"Emily!" he was beside the car. "Oh, Roger, I'm sorry!" she said quickly. "I didn't want to come but your mother—"

"Yes, what about mother? What's happened to her?" Roger's voice was sharp with concern.

"She's upset. Roger. She found John there after you left. He spilled something. I don't know how much. Anyhow she called me and asked me to come right over. When I got there it was this. She was worried and wanted an explanation."

"How much have you told her?" Roger asked. He was aware of a sense of relief. If it was coming to a head now it would be better than dragging it out.

"Nothing—almost. How could I? I know nothing. I told her you'd be home immediately. I was sure you would. And then if there was anything to tell you'd tell her."

Roger felt a distinct admiration for the girl as she searched her face. A thoroughbred. No breaking down. No complaining tears. No working up anyone's sympathy. Emily! Emily!

"Thank you, Emily," he said quickly.

"You'll be down?" she asked uncertainly, her hand on the shift. "Right away."

She glanced toward the house fleetly then and for a moment, Roger wondered if Emily's conspicuous beauty was evident anywhere.

Promise To Lovely

"WHAT was it? What did she want?" Lovely asked hurriedly as soon as Roger returned to the screened porch.

"Have you been here all the time?" he asked.

"No, I just came out as she was turning." Roger knew a strange and unaccountable feeling of gladness. Emily hadn't seen her then. She hadn't been hurt by the blinding beauty of the girl.

"I've got to go home, Lovely," he said seriously.

"To her, you mean?" Emotion playing over the words like swift movement over shadowy water. "Look, even your dog goes with her!"

Roger was aware then that Blaze had stayed in the car and gone down with Emily. Well, Blaze had always loved Emily.

"Even your dog, Roger! He goes with her! Just like you, you're going to her!"

"I'm not, Lovely." Patiently and with tenderness. "I'm going to my mother. She's heard about us and it's disturbed her."

"But she'll be there. You'll see Emily again."

"Perhaps," he smiled gently. "But that shouldn't disturb you."

"It does." Earnestly. "It does, Roger. Oh, Roger, I can't let you go back to her. I thought I could give you up. I thought so but now I know I can't. I won't. I can't. I'll die if you go back—"

His arms swept her close against his heart; his lips were on hers in a kiss that was swift and fierce.

"You won't have to give me up, Lovely," he said with passion. "Nor will I give you up. You'll never have to go back to your sister's. That is a promise I'm making you and I'm going to keep it."

He reflected as he went down the hill that she was like an April day in Westchester, sunlight and shadow, all quick changes and lovely surprises. Patiently closing heads caught and die horribly.

Screaming at him in a rage that she hated him and would get even. One moment she'd give him up. The next she was clinging to him madly, swearing she couldn't. Life would never be dull with her.

Emily was at his house. The houseman told him she was waiting for him in the library. He went to her and to his mother.

Marcia Cosgrave never beat about the bush.

"Roger, what goes on?" she asked brightly and frankly. "I've gotten wind of something but I can't clear it up. Something between you and Emily? What was John spouting out of his cups about? The blonde business. I mean?"

Her words were clear, crisp, direct. Marcia's whole life had been like that.

Betty Dyke Bride of John Knapp Saturday

At three o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Youngsville Methodist parsonage, Rev. Dwight Jack united in marriage Miss Betty Dyke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G.
Dyke, of Lottsville, and John
Knapp, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. H.
Knapp, of Youngsville.

The bride chose navy and pink accessories with a frock of navy crepe, street-length, and wore a corsage of pink roses and white narcissus. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald, of Lottsville, who wore pink with blue accessories and a corsage of blue iris.

Kenneth Crispell, of Jamestown,
N. Y., was Mr. Knapp's best man.
Others witnessing the ceremony were Mr. Fitzgerald and Mrs.
Crispell.
Fifty guests were invited for the four o'clock reception at the Dyke home. Centering the bride's table, where the guests were served buffet style, was a three-tiered wedding cake decorated with a miniature bride and groom. Aides at the table were Miss Munksgard, Mrs.
Francis Doud, Mrs. Mildred Van Orsdale. Guests were from Warren, Youngsville, Irvine, Sugar Creek, Wrightsville, Lander and Jamestown, N. Y.

Later, the couple left for a wedding trip to Buffalo, N. Y., and are at home at 305 1/2 East street.
Both young people are well known in the county, the bride having graduated from Lottsville High School in 1935 and the bridegroom from Youngsville High School in 1934. Miss Knapp is employed in the diet kitchen at the Warren State Hospital and Mr.
Knapp is employed as an attendant at the institution.

Pre-nuptial parties were given by the following to compliment
Miss Dyke: Mrs. Paul Reynolds and Mrs. Albert Fay; Mrs. Howard VanOrsdale and Mrs. Sam
Loomis; Miss Geraldine Brownell;
Mrs. Kenneth Crispell and Mrs.
Harry Munksgard; Mrs. Edith Husted and Miss Nellie Knapp;
Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald; Mrs. Marvel Baker, Mrs. Erman Abbott and Mrs. Allen Gourley.

30th Anniversary Banquet Planned By DAR Group

Members of General Joseph
Warren Chapter, National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, are asked to make their birthday banquet reservations no later than Wednesday morning with Mrs. Warren R. Carlin, 1446, or Mrs. O. H. Baird, 879-R.

The banquet, marking the chapter's 30th anniversary, will be served at 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening at the Woman's Club.
Hostesses are Mrs. Baird, chairman, Mrs. J. H. DePres, Mrs.
Daisy Hanchett, Mrs. James Connelly, Mrs. G. W. Olmsted, Miss Ethel DeForest, Miss Hildegard
Edwards and Mrs. J. A. Shippe.

This is an open meeting and members may bring guests for the dinner and the very interesting program that will be presented afterwards.
Chapter members will meet promptly at six o'clock for a brief business meeting, the purpose of which is election of delegates and alternates to the Continental Congress, meeting of the national society in April in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Yerg Gives Tea
For Margaret Maurer
Mrs. A. Folmer Yerg, 313 East street, gave a beautifully appointed tea at the Woman's Club from four until six Saturday afternoon to compliment Miss Margaret Maurer.

Miss Maurer will become the bride of Robert Crosssett, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Crosssett, on Saturday, March 1.
Mrs. John Maurer, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. D. W.
Crosssett presided at a table made very attractive with red carnations and red candles. Carrying out the red and white color thought were beautiful white gladdell on the dining room mantle.
From out of town were Mrs.
Edolph Carlson, Mrs. James Syb-eckup and Mrs. Kenneth Graham, of Jamestown, N. Y.

New Headgear---From the Headlines

THE countries defending Democracy furnished inspiration for many of the hats in the spring collection of Helen Liebert, American milliner. The one at left is inspired by the quaint uniform of the Evzones, famous Greek mountain fighters. It's really a navy straw pillbox, banded with tiny acorn tassels and topped with a huge Evzone pom-pom. At right, is a shallow skimmer to wear behind a pompadour. It's of white straw with a black crinoline fringe under the little upturned brim. The hat pins which hold it on have crinoline balls for heads.

peal to all Methodists on Sunday, February 23rd, from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., over stations KDKA, Pittsburgh; WPIC, Sharon, and WJTN, Jamestown, N. Y., to ask their cooperation in the emergency relief campaign for one million dollars.

Church members in the Erie Conference are being asked to contribute $13,000 as their share in this national project. This fund is to center in a cash donation to be made by Sunday, March 2, designated as the "Day of Compassion," with special services to be observed in all Methodist churches.

The national fund is to be divided into three divisions for administration. A quarter of a million dollars is to be used for work in and with the army camps in this country, a quarter of a million is to be used to assist British Methodism, and a half million is to be used to relieve the missionaries of European Protestant Churches who are stranded in distant lands with no support from their home bases.
Part of this fund will be used to care for and evacuate missionaries in war areas where they can no longer work, as well as to aid prisoners of war in Germany, France, England and Australia, and refugees throughout continental Europe.

The work at home is being done in conjunction with the chaplains' department of both the army and navy. With the present regulations making it impossible for the chaplains to have the assistance of the Y. M. C. A. and other agencies, churches in the neighborhood of the rapidly expanding camp centers must be strengthened and equipped to provide adequate recreation and religious care.

Special promotion campaigns in all the local churches will supplement this broadcast by Bishop Straughn. Radios are being installed and Bishop Straughn's message will be heard as part of the Sunday School program of February 23.

All Necessary Buildings And Facilities In Read- iness at Indiantown Gap

(From Page One)
His greeting said, "If you pursue it intelligently you will leave the army in an improved physical condition; you will have made a long list of true comrades who will remain your staunch friends throughout life; but above all you will have a greater appreciation of our country. x x x Never before in the history of war has imdividual training been so important as now."

At another point he said "you will come to the reservation at the worst time of the year. It gave employees two weeks' vacation with the mud that oozes almost everywhere when the sun shines a few hours at a time. Or he might have been thinking of the memorable February storms that have hit this valley.
At any rate, he reported that all of the necessary buildings and facilities would be ready for the arrival of the infantry, artillery and specialized troops beginning Feb. 24th.
During the week's stay in the armories many of the soldiers will sleep in their homes at night, reporting for duty at times specified by their commanders. They'll eat at restaurants in evenings. The armories are not available in armories.
But once in camp it will be every weekday morning and taps at 10 p. m. On Sunday the soldier can sleep late--until 6:45 a.

Warren providing a musical program.

Afterward there will be a card party for the public in the school auditorium, with prizes for high scorers and special awards.

LACY UNIT
The Lacy P. T. A. will meet Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the school to observe Founders Day and the Boy Scout anniversary.
Calvin Hall, county Scout executive, will show a program of moving pictures of Scout activities.
This will be the last call for membership.

IRVINGDALE UNIT
The Irvingdale P. T. A. will meet at the school at eight o'clock tomorrow evening and all members are asked to turn out for an interesting program.

Dragons Go to Johnsonburg Tomorrow for Important Tilt

Win Over Jays Would Give Locals Jump On Pennant Contenders

Coach Kolpien's Dragon basketball team is due to appear in Johnsonburg tomorrow night in a clash which will be watched with interest throughout the North League. The Dragons will be looking for a victory over the Jays, who were easily defeated, 49-35, in the first game of the season. The Dragons will be looking for a victory over the Jays, who were easily defeated, 49-35, in the first game of the season.

The Johnny's will be playing with their backs against the wall for a defeat will virtually eliminate them from consideration, while a win is likely to throw the entire circuit into a four-way tie, providing the Owls take over Kane. The Dragon Second will also make the trip and will meet the Blue Jays reserves in the preliminary.

To Dick "Red" Tucker will probably go the task of holding down Frank Gigliotti, ace of the Johnnies, and the battling guard has demonstrated before that the basketball player is just another Johnny's who was easily defeated, 49-35, and Tucker not only held Gigliotti to the minimum but outscored him.

The Johnny's will be watching Warren's major scoring threat, "Jap" Conroy, but to date none has been able to smother the cagy Dragon flash. Paired with Conroy on the forward line will be John Nick, who has also proved to be a dangerous man. At center, shifty "Chuck" Hofecker will hold forth, and "Sling" Brown will help Tucker on the defensive lines.

Interest has reached a fever pitch here, and it is expected that another large crowd of fans will make the trip to the Paper City.

Lacy	2	1	.667
East	2	1	.667
South	2	1	.667
Jefferson	1	2	.333
McClintock	1	2	.333

Three teams are now tied for the leadership of the Gra-Y loop as a result of Saturday's play. Lacy, East and South all have two victories and one defeat.

East handed Lacy its first defeat, 4 to 2, with Wilson getting four points. Bevevino three and Swanson two for the winners and Nelson the only basket for Lacy. Lewis scored all four points in Jeff's 4-2 win over McClintock, with Denardi getting the lone basket for the losers.

Final games in the second half are to be played next Saturday with East meeting Jeff and South clashing with Lacy.

TEXAS LUNCH IN FOUR-POINT WIN; MARCONI TIPPED

The Koch's-Texas Inter-City rollers squared away for a dash down the pennant stretch yesterday by dropping the Lafayette Inn team for all four points at Bradford.

Dick Check, substituting for Norm Wooster, turned in 627 and Pete Juliano, who is leading the local rollers in the average department, didn't hurt himself a bit with 608. After a bad start, Myron Check tossed 223 and 235 games into the collection, and wound up with 591, but his brother's 224 topped him for high game by a pin.

At the Arcade the Marconi Club, Warren's other Inter-City entry could take only one point from the Bradford All-Penns. They dropped the third game by 13 pins and total by 22. Graebner's 576 was top total and Sam Cosmano's 211 was the only Marconi game in the honor roll class. Marry in the 612 to lead the winners.

BUCCANEER ROOKIE STILL A HOLDOUT

Pittsburgh, Feb. 17.—(P)—Rookie Shortstop Alf Anderson, who never has worn a Pittsburgh uniform, is causing the Pirates club's only contract trouble as a 2 spring conditioning grounds.

Impressed by Anderson's 351 batting with Atlanta of the Southern Association last year, the Pirates gave $19,000 and Pep Young for him with the idea of having him understudy Captain Arky Vaughan at short.

Returning his contract unsigned, Anderson said at his Decatur, Ga., home that the offer was "not much different from what I was getting with Atlanta." It was n't what I thought I ought to get. It wouldn't take but a few more to make me satisfied."

LOUIS SPECIAL Warren High Gridders STOPS TO TAKE To Meet Eleven Foes; ON GUS DORAZIO Drop Strong Vincent

Another eleven-game schedule for Warren High's 1941 football team was announced last week by Director of Athletics Jacob B. Leidig.

The Dragon gridders will meet ten of the opponents they faced this year, only Eric Strong-Vincent being missing. Youngsville, which appeared on most Warren schedules and dropped off last season, returns.

This year the Leidigmen will meet six teams at Russell Field and five teams away. Eric Academy, Youngsville, Girard, Kane, Oil City and Bradford will play here and the locals will visit grids there.

In this respect, the under-slung 190-pounder probably will be in a minority of one among the record local indoor crowd of 13,000 expected to sit in on the proceedings.

TALE OF TAPE
Louis	Dorazio
26 years	22 years

8 inches	wrist 7 1/2 inches
11 1/2 inches	thigh 23 1/2 inches
22 inches	calf 15 1/2 inches
15 inches	ankle 9 inches

Not even the paid-up members of the D. C. & C. S. (Dorazio Cheering and Chowder Society) believe Gus has a chance, although Louis was far from the destroyer of old in knocking off Pudgy McCoy and gallant Red Burman in the first two outings of his winter tour. Dorazio brings to the table the same half-crouching, bobbing, weaving style which bothered the Bomber against Burman, Arturo Godoy, Tony Galento and Tommy Farr in the past. The 23-year-old warrior also packs more confidence than most of the fellows who've tangled with Joe in his 13 previous defenses of the night game's most prized bauble.

Those factors should enable Gus to hang around for a while tonight to give the cash customers some entertainment. This corner believes he'll hear the birdies sing inside of four rounds. The chief worry Gus' handlers have at the moment is that their gladiator may be cut around the eyes by punches, as was the case the night he lost to Billy Conn.

The champion's fistie family isn't swayed a little bit. Joe shuffled off a train last night with the word he'd "take care of Mr. Dorazio the first time I catches him with a good punch." Nor could "Chappie" Blackburn, his trainer, and Co-managers Julian Black and John Roxborough find any reason to run for the asphalt bottle. They already were making plans for the champion's 15th title defense, against enormous Abe Simon in Detroit March 21.

February 17, 1931. In one of the most exciting games ever played at the Y. M. C. A. court, the Nameless Five defeated the Jamestown American Legion last night, 45-42, in a game that took three extra periods to decide. Warren's Iron men, Harry Conroy, Bony Keller, Webb Scherist and Nick Wendelbo played throughout the tilt. Conroy, with seven field goals and eleven fouls, led the scoring. Referee Bill Yeager did a great job in such a hot battle and is receiving plenty of praise.

February 17, 1931. Frank Fadale, of the Quick Lunch team, leads the Class "A" Industrial Bowling League averages with 197. Baldensperger, Gerould and Juliano are right behind, deadlocked for second place with 193, and Fritz Rydholm has 191.

Harold Zimmerman, voted the most outstanding scholastic gymnast in Pennsylvania last year, took first place in tumbling and on the parallel bars while Ed Anderson, also a member of the 1940 state champion Warren High team, topped second place in tumbling and third on the bars.

In the varsity meet, the Nittany Lions defeated the University of Chicago, 20 1/2 to 15 1/2. Homer V. Fleming, who was invited to be one of the judges, took ten of this year's team to State College.

SPORT SPATTERINGS

We must have answered dozens of queries Saturday morning about Friday night's Bradford-Johnsonburg game, and we were more than a little puzzled by the means of disappointment which greeted the information that the Owls had tripped the Jays, 29-21. Isn't that what the Dragons would have gone to Johnsonburg faced with the necessity of stopping the Paper City crew or being out of the race, themselves. Instead, they can practically sew up the flag tomorrow night and even if they lose they are pretty sure to be a party to a second half play-off, at about the worst. It took an undefeated team to win the first half, and a glance at the second semester schedule indicates that it may take seven victories to clinch the other flag, too. Kane, of course, is still tied with the Dragons, but the Wolves' three wins have been over Emporium, St. Marys and Sheffield, and with the Owls, Johnnies and Dragons still on the waiting list, the chance for a pennant's going to the hilltop doesn't appear particularly bright.

Readers of "Esquire" will find a splendid article in the current issue, written by Bob Considine and dealing with the actions and reactions of crowds which follow various sports. Incidentally, the author tells of a number of famous fan wisecracks, many of which will be as new to you as to us. One we liked especially. At Madison Square Garden this winter a couple of preliminary boys were putting on a very dull performance much to the disgust of the cash customers, and one of the gladiators was an unusual misfit. For three rounds this pug, who had a punch that wouldn't have knocked off his mother's hat, adopted a program of warily circling his opponent, left arm extended and his cream puff right cocked in a threatening manner. The crowd had grown so weary of watching exactly nothing develop that it had lapsed into a lofty silence. Suddenly, the hush was broken by some leather-lung in the upper tier who bellowed, "Hit him now, sweetheart! You got the wind with you!"

If the Sugar Grove basketballers are a little short on cash this week it's because they spent no little change on a bunch of comic valentines, addressed to your agent, and received in the same spirit in which they were sent — we hope. At least, they bear the signatures of most of the Grovers' stellar hoopers who are making life miserable for the rest of the teams in the northern division of the Upper Allegheny circuit. We think we know what was eating the boys when they sent one in particular, and we can't blame them much, but unless they fix up some way to get the box scores into this office early on the morning following their games, we can't correct the situation. A telephone call—reversed—will do the trick. And to Don Haggerty, F. Judge, E. Abbott, Jerry Kelley, Landin, Stuart, Carlberg, Pep Abbott and Cheerleader Jamieson—sure, we'll be your valentine. And to the Abbott boys, an additional task, task. This bureau is an accredited member of the Abbott-Allen clan, so hi, cousins!

YES, CHICAGO HAS NO BANANAS BONURA

Chicago, Feb. 17.—(P)—The Chicago Cubs today announced the sale of First Baseman Zeke (Bananas) Bonura to Minneapolis of the American Association in a straight cash transaction. The amount was not disclosed.

Bonura, who has played with three major league clubs—Chicago White Sox, Washington Senators and New York Giants—was purchased by the Cubs last year from Washington.

He was obtained in the middle of the season after appendicitis had forced Glenn Russell from the lineup and an ankle injury put the other Cub first baseman, Phil Cavaretta, on the sidelines.

Bonura, a right-handed, battled 264 in the 49 games he played with the Cubs last year. He broke into the big time with the White Sox in 1934.

A black and white cartoon illustration. In the foreground, a large, portly man wearing a dark, textured overcoat and a top hat is being interviewed. He is holding a small sign that reads "POOR 75%". A reporter, wearing a light-colored trench coat and a hat with a "NEWS" sign, is holding a microphone to the man's mouth. In the background, two other men in hats and coats are walking away from the scene. The drawing is done in a simple, bold line style with some cross-hatching for shading.

"Let's stick around and see how this comes out."

of Sydney would start today on construction of 13 public air raid shelters.

In Tokyo, however, a hopeful note was ascribed to Chuichi Ohashi, Japan's vice foreign minister. Domei, official Japanese newspaper quoted him as saying, "Other Pacific powers are becoming too nervous... and are applying unwarranted pressure against Japan."

It said he declared Japan hoped to settle South Seas questions "without resorting to force" and called intimations that Japanese action was imminent "misreports."

Britons in Japanese-occupied portions of China again were urged to leave and the British consul asked women and children living in Thailand (Siam) to depart.

British planes carried out a heavy series of attacks on German-held channel ports and the industrial Ruhr district in Germany during the weekend. The British acknowledged that five planes were missing. The German High Command said ten were shot down. Bad weather brought a lull Sunday which continued through the night.

Berlin also claimed 37,000 tons of British shipping had been sunk in new plane, submarine and warship attacks, and that three merchant vessels and a light British cruiser were damaged.

A Greek government spokesman reported a battle in Albania in which only 200 Italians escaped out of a force of 1,200. Yugoslav border guards said the Greeks had captured 2,000 Fascists and large quantities of equipment in an attack on the Italian eleventh army.

In Africa the British said their troops regained the Ethiopian-Sudanese frontier post of Kurum which the Italians seized last summer.

The British said south African troops pushing into Italian Somaliland from Kenya now held about 10,000 square miles of that Fascist colony.

In Yugoslavia minister without portfolio Kulenovic said Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic in his recent trip to see Adolf Hitler had "secured the future of Yugoslavia."

It was the first official speech made since the trip was undertaken but gave no details.

508 HOLDUP VICTIMS ARE LEFT "PANTLESS"

Reading, Feb. 17.—(P)—A Central city billiard and bowling parlor and 50 male patrons were robbed of several thousand dollars early today by four men with pistols who forced the customers to take off their trousers and line up against a wall.

Detective James Bowman said the robbers grabbed money from tables, emptied the cash register and then spent about 35 minutes going through the pockets of the trousers, which they threw in a heap on the floor, arriving at the York Hill road. Some walked down this road to Youngsville, and those who brought cars returned to the York farm over the side road, picking up the other members at Youngsville. The trip covered between five and six miles.

The party drove to the Grant York farm between Youngsville and Pittsfield and then walked up over a portion of York Hill through beautiful woods paths, coming to the Davey Hill road. There they turned left and walked along the road on this ridge, enjoying the excellent views on clear wintry day, arriving at the York Hill road. Some walked down this road to Youngsville, and those who brought cars returned to the York farm over the side road, picking up the other members at Youngsville. The trip covered between five and six miles.

Records of a secret process for steel manufacture, which disappeared last week from the offices of the Warner Company at Devault, Pa., have been recovered and a German-born chemist is in jail on a charge of stealing them.

The prisoner, Irvin Kneil, 41, assistant chemist for the Chester county firm, is being held under $25,000 bail at West Chester for a hearing tomorrow night. He was arrested Thursday at his apartment at Phoenixville.

Kneil, a graduate of Heidelberg University, became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1936.

Before reaching the Browder case the court overruled a government contention that the Federal Trade Commission act, which outlaws unfair competitive methods, should be applied to activities entirely within one state if they affect interstate commerce.

Justice Pitkin, after delivering the opinion, which set aside a trade commission order against Bunte Brothers, Inc., Chicago candy manufacturers.

Major Tussle Over Hospitals Is Shaping Up

in the House, asserted that "one of the objectives" of a survey of the needs and capacities of the county institutions, started today, was to support such opposition.

James asked the legislature for another two-year postponement of the effective date of a 1938 act which would transfer 12 county hospitals to the state.

The prisoner, Irvin Kneil, 41, assistant chemist for the Chester county firm, is being held under $25,000 bail at West Chester for a hearing tomorrow night. He was arrested Thursday at his apartment at Phoenixville.

Kneil, a graduate of Heidelberg University, became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1936.

Before reaching the Browder case the court overruled a government contention that the Federal Trade Commission act, which outlaws unfair competitive methods, should be applied to activities entirely within one state if they affect interstate commerce.

Justice Pitkin, after delivering the opinion, which set aside a trade commission order against Bunte Brothers, Inc., Chicago candy manufacturers.
